Certified Brain Injury Specialist

What

BIANC provides Certified Brain Injury Specialist (CBIS) training to professionals and service workers across North Carolina. A three day class is available specifically to review material for the certification exam, and to strengthen the network of dedicated, competent brain injury specialists across North Carolina.

Who

The CBIS and CBIST certifications are developed and administered through the Brain Injury Association of America. These designations require an applicant to pass a standardized exam, possess a high school education, and complete 500 hours of paid work experience with brain injury in the past 3 years.

The CBIS program has new materials and information! The chart below explains the different training options you can attend the class. Options include attending the class to become CBIS by completing the exam, or attending the class for review of brain injury information without taking the exam. In addition, current CBIS can use the new training as CEUs for their certification renewal.
